SCRIPT REGISTRATION & CREATIVE RIGHTS

THE PENSIONER GANG • FEATURE FILM PROJECT

The screenplay for The Pensioner Gang has been registered with both the Writers Guild of America and the Writers Guild of the United Kingdom / Great Britain.

This registration forms part of the project's documented development and creative record and demonstrates that the screenplay has been formally recorded through recognised writers' guild registration processes.

The project is based on the established The Pensioner Gang story and has been developed for feature-film production. The screenplay, story world, characters and production materials remain subject to the appropriate intellectual property and contractual arrangements.

For investors and production partners, this provides an additional level of documented provenance for the screenplay as the project progresses through casting, financing, production and international distribution discussions.

Project status: Registered screenplay • International development • Proposed principal photography from March 2027

Registration records authorship and/or the existence of deposited material and should be considered alongside the project's formal legal and contractual documentation. It does not replace independent legal advice regarding copyright ownership, chain of title or investor agreements.

INVESTMENT OPPORTUNITY

Proposed investment structure for The Pensioner Gang feature film

Diamond Film Productions is seeking to raise up to $2 million AUD through a limited number of investor packages to finance the development and production of The Pensioner Gang.

THE FIVE INVESTMENT PACKAGES

Package	Initial Commitment	Further Drawdown	Total Package
1	$100,000 AUD	Up to $300,000 AUD as required	$400,000 AUD
2	$100,000 AUD	Up to $300,000 AUD as required	$400,000 AUD
3	$100,000 AUD	Up to $300,000 AUD as required	$400,000 AUD
4	$100,000 AUD	Up to $300,000 AUD as required	$400,000 AUD
5	$100,000 AUD	Up to $300,000 AUD as required	$400,000 AUD
TOTAL	$500,000 AUD	Up to $1,500,000 AUD	$2,000,000 AUD

Initial investment: An investment of $100,000 AUD secures one complete investment package. The remaining $300,000 AUD attached to that package is intended to be drawn down only as required for production expenditure, particularly for the European production phase in London and Amsterdam.

Investor return structure: The proposed investment documentation is intended to provide for an industry-standard target return of 1.5 times the investor's investment as a minimum target, with the potential for substantially higher returns should the film become a major commercial success. Final return terms will be set out in the formal investment and production agreements.

Independent financial oversight: All production costs and investor drawdowns will be independently audited, with investor-approved accountants involved in the financial oversight process. This is intended to provide transparency around the use of production funds and expenditure during the life of the project.

COMMERCIAL & DISTRIBUTION STRATEGY

The production is also in negotiation with companies regarding product and brand inclusion within the film. Appropriate commercial partnerships and product placement opportunities may provide additional revenue and production support while maintaining the integrity of the story.

Producer/Director Geoff Harrison plans to attend MIPCOM CANNES in October 2026 to pursue distribution discussions with Netflix and other major streaming platforms, distributors and international buyers. The objective is to build distribution relationships and explore commercial opportunities for the completed feature in international markets.

Production schedule: Major casting is planned ahead of principal photography, with filming currently scheduled to begin in March 2027 in London and Amsterdam.

The investment proposal combines a limited number of substantial investor packages with staged capital drawdowns designed to align funding with actual production requirements.

Important: This document is a project overview and does not replace formal legal, financial or investment documentation. All investment terms, return arrangements, drawdown mechanisms and investor rights should be independently reviewed and documented before funds are committed.

MINI TREATMENT — STORY OVERVIEW

PAGE 1 OF 2 • THE SET-UP AND THE INTERNATIONAL OPERATION

The Pensioner Gang is a British crime story built around an unexpected premise: the men at the centre of the operation are not young gangsters but ageing South London criminals whose ordinary appearance has become their greatest disguise.

The story begins in and around the Blue Anchor in Bermondsey, where Watty and his old associates move through the routines of later life while carrying the experience, loyalties and instincts of a criminal world they thought was behind them. Peg runs the pub and quietly acts as a communications link within a wider network. As old connections resurface, the ageing crew—known as the Flock—are drawn back into one final operation.

The action expands from London to Amsterdam. Watty and the Flock enter a Dutch criminal world involving Remco, Tulip and the dangerous Bram de Vries. The Dutch side expects hardened young English criminals. Instead, a warehouse door opens and the visitors are elderly men—complete with the appearance and mannerisms of pensioners. The moment provides one of the film's signature comic reveals, but the humour quickly gives way to tension as the Flock demonstrate that age has not made them harmless.

Running alongside the gang's journey is a growing web of surveillance and investigation. Lois observes developments through her own intelligence network and information is passed back through established channels, while Canal leads the Dutch police investigation. The Flock believe they understand the people around them, but gradually it becomes clear that the operation is larger—and more controlled—than anyone first imagined.

The international operation develops around a major criminal distribution scheme. A separate financial thread involving Tarquin Farquar builds toward one of the film's most cinematic set pieces: a desperate attempt to raise £5 million culminates in the entire sum being placed on black in Monaco—and winning.

Back in Britain, the consequences of the Amsterdam operation grow. The criminal network expands, money changes hands and the Flock find themselves caught between old loyalties, international criminals and increasingly determined investigators. The tone combines genuine crime-thriller stakes with dry British humour, using the gang's age as both an advantage and a constant source of surprise.

By the end of the first movement of the story, the question is no longer simply whether these old gangsters can complete one last job. The real question is: who is actually moving the pieces?

PAGE 2 OF 2 • THE RAID, THE FORTUNE AND THE FINAL SECRET

The operation eventually leads to a fully functioning British distribution factory. When police close in, they find the drugs, equipment and paperwork—but not the men they expected to arrest. In one of the story's darkest comic moments, the Flock are sitting in the pub next door. The bizarre absence of the gang from the centre of their own operation becomes known as the “Mary Celeste” element of the case.

The Flock are subsequently arrested and the case becomes a public spectacle. The trial brings together serious criminal evidence, media attention and the absurdity of a prosecution built around a gang of pensioners who never looked remotely like conventional organised criminals. Despite the comedy surrounding their image, the consequences are real: the men are convicted and sentenced to prison.

After their eventual release, however, the greatest mystery remains unresolved. The UK drug dealers paid the Flock £60 million for the drugs. The drugs themselves are recovered, but the money has disappeared. Watty, the surviving members of the Flock and the investigator Owl attempt to reconstruct what happened, examining the Dutch criminals, British dealers and the network of people who touched the operation. No one can find the fortune.

The story then reveals its deeper layer. The audience discovers that the shadowy figure known as Weaver has been manipulating the wider game from behind the scenes. The crucial twist is that Weaver is Dee, Watty's wife. Watty never discovers the truth. The man trying to understand who has been controlling events has been living with the person who knows the answers all along.

The final dramatic irony is even more powerful: Weaver knows where the missing £60 million is. Owl never finds it. Watty never learns the full truth. The Flock can return to the familiar world of the Blue Anchor believing they have survived the greatest adventure of their lives, while the audience is left with knowledge the characters do not possess.

The result is a feature with a distinctive blend of British gangster drama, dark humour, international intrigue and mystery. Its visual world moves from traditional London pubs and warehouses to Amsterdam and Monaco, while its emotional centre remains rooted in friendship, loyalty, ageing and the secrets people keep from those closest to them.

Key cinematic moments: the pensioner reveal at the warehouse door; the Amsterdam criminal underworld; the £5 million Monaco roulette bet; the “Mary Celeste” factory raid; the high-profile trial; and the final revelation that changes the audience's understanding of the entire story.

PRODUCTION EQUIPMENT PACKAGE

Recommended professional ownership package • Maximum budget: $50,000 AUD

The recommended strategy is to own the core camera, lens, lighting and sound package, while hiring specialist equipment—particularly high-end cinema drones—only for the days it is genuinely required.

1. MAIN CAMERA PACKAGE

Recommended principal camera: Sony Cinema Line FX6. A practical full-frame professional cinema camera suited to a mixture of interiors, exteriors and lower-light scenes. Its compact form, professional workflow and built-in electronic variable ND make it a flexible centrepiece for a feature production.

Camera allocation (including batteries, media and essential accessories): $9,500

2. CORE LENS PACKAGE

Lens	Primary role	Budget
24–70mm f/2.8	Main workhorse for dialogue, interiors and general coverage	$2,500
70–200mm f/2.8	Close-ups, compression and exterior work	$3,100
35mm fast prime	Low-light interiors and cinematic medium/wide shots	$1,700–$2,200
50mm or 85mm fast prime	Portraits and dramatic close-ups; final choice after testing	$1,500–$2,000

Target lens allocation: $9,000

3. LIGHTING PACKAGE

Invest in a flexible package rather than one oversized fixture: a powerful 600-class bi-colour key light, two 300-class bi-colour fixtures, an RGB/soft LED panel, smaller accent lights, softboxes and lanterns, diffusion, reflectors, negative fill, C-stands, heavy-duty stands, sandbags, flags, power and cases.

Target lighting allocation: $14,000

PRODUCTION SOUND, SUPPORT & DRONE STRATEGY

4. PROFESSIONAL SOUND PACKAGE

Recommended core package: a professional multi-track field recorder/mixer, broadcast-quality shotgun microphone, 2–4 professional wireless lavalier channels, boom pole, shock mount, wind protection, monitoring headphones, timecode system, cables and backup accessories. For a feature film, the production sound recordist is as important as the equipment itself.

Target sound allocation: $7,000

5. CAMERA SUPPORT, MONITORING & ACCESSORIES

Professional fluid-head tripod; production/director monitor; camera cage and shoulder rig; follow-focus; matte box; ND and diffusion filters; additional batteries; professional recording media and card readers; backup SSDs; and protective hard cases.

Target support and accessories allocation: $6,000

6. HIGH-END CINEMA DRONES — HIRE AS REQUIRED

Rather than purchasing a high-end cinema drone, hire an experienced aerial cinematography crew with an Inspire 3 or equivalent professional system for the specific shooting days requiring aerial footage. This preserves capital for equipment used throughout the entire production and provides specialist pilots, safety systems and appropriate insurance.

7. PROPOSED EQUIPMENT BUDGET

Department	Budget (AUD)
FX6 camera, batteries and media	$9,500
Professional lens package	$9,000
Lighting package	$14,000
Professional sound package	$7,000
Support, monitoring and rigging	$6,000
TOTAL PLANNED EQUIPMENT	$45,500
RESERVE / CONTINGENCY	$4,500
MAXIMUM BUDGET	$50,000

RECOMMENDED PURCHASE STAGING

Stage 1: Purchase the FX6, two core zoom lenses, essential batteries, media and tripod.

Stage 2: Test 35mm, 50mm and 85mm prime options with the Director of Photography and establish the visual and colour workflow.

Stage 3: Finalise the lighting and sound package and hire specialist drones, cinema lenses or additional equipment for particular sequences.

Overall recommendation: Build a flexible production asset base rather than spending the entire budget on a single camera body. The combination of a professional main camera, high-quality lenses, controlled lighting and reliable sound will contribute more to the finished feature than an unnecessarily expensive one-item purchase.
